

Depending on Mother Nature is no picnic.

Most people will cancel a picnic if there's a small chance of rain, so imagine if your life and livelihood depended on the weather. That's what America's farmers face every day. In fact, it has been reported that 5 million acres of crops were destroyed in the recent Midwest flooding — an area as big as New Jersey.

That's why crop insurance is so essential. It provides a safety net against perils such as frost, drought, flooding—the uncontrollable changes in weather that can mean crop loss. Support crop insurance. Think of it as a 5 million acre umbrella.
